

Jesus: First-Century Rabbi

By Zaslow, David; Lieberman, Joseph A.

Paraclete Press, 2013. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: Rabbi Zaslow has done a tremendous service to Christians and Jews alike--this book is wonderful! An important contribution to the continuing dialogue and relationship building between these two faith communities. We need to hear more of what brings us together, what we share, not just what sets us apart. Thank you both Rabbi Zaslow and Paraclete for bringing this work to fruition and for creating greater light in our world! Rabbi Yechiel Eckstein, President, International Fellowship of Christians and Jews Today our faith traditions are in need of healing -- both within themselves and with each other. Rabbi Zaslow's book is a dose of sacred medicine for both Christianity and Judaism. He challenges us to face our prejudices, while affirming and celebrating our unique traditions. While Jesus has a different meaning for a Christian and a Jew, reflecting on that can take us on a deeper and yet more universal journey into our own faith. Based on solid scholarship and a luminous open heart, Zaslow makes a powerful and much needed contribution to the interfaith dialogue. Joan Borysenko, Ph.D. Author of A Woman's...
