As a young boy, the author grew up experiencing the winter hunger 1944, in his parent s home, by collecting food and fuel. Twenty years later he suffered in a hurricane wrecked off the South African coast. His life consisted of fish before and after. Jan Krijgsman was a young mate on the ship in 1945. The first postwar herring was brought ashore and fished from 1957 to 1970 off the coast of South Africa. An adventure story about captains, drivers and cooks, fish species and fishing methods, collegiality and deceit, ports and cheese head. Jan Krijgsman (1930) is a descendant of a Scheveningen-Katwijk fishing family that is not only blessed with a strong constitution and a good nose for the best fishing grounds, but also with a writing talent. After an eventful life he began to write his memoirs after 2000, retired and living in Serooskerke Walcheren. Thus was born, in collaboration with historian Jan Zwemer, his book-the adventures of life of a fisherman s boy.
