Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .residing on their lands or middle paying them rent, in money or labour--Lewis had its share of them; but we do not hear men- such serious complaints made against them as against those in the neighbouring islands. The tacksmen of former days were of two classes. Those who came first in date were the friends of the Chief, and deemed it a duty to have a large number of subtenants with whom they dealt kindly. James Macdonald, in his General new of the Agriculture of tfa Hebrides (1811), refers to the old order of tacksmen as follows: -- Various causes, which are sufficiently obvious, combined to throw the greater part of the Hebrides into the hands of this description of men. They were friends or relatives of the proprietors, who had no other means of providing for their connections than by giving them portions of their...
